NOTE I am not interested in new opportunities at this time.

EMPLOYMENT March 2014–present
National Public Radio (NPR), Washington, DC
I am a full-stack developer on the Digital Media team, which maintains and improves npr.org, our CMS, and the NPR One suite of mobile apps. I have worked on internal infrastructure, NPR Music's responsive redesign, and the third-party developer platform for NPR One (dev.npr.org). In 2016, I will be rebuilding the NPR One HTML5 webapp from the ground up.

November 2012–March 2014
EdLab | Columbia University Teachers College, New York, NY
As a full-stack developer specializing in front-end and Javascript, I was the lead developer on EdLab's newest product, mSchool, which featured a sophisticated front-end using AngularJS and an experimental back-end in node.js and Neo4j. I also helped maintain older products using Django.

August 2011–August 2012
ITP Equipment Room Web Developer, New York, NY
I developed a PHP-based online checkout system for ITP's A/V equipment
